WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Surface high pressure building into the Great Basin will bring the potential for a moderate to strong, but short-lived, Santa Ana event late Saturday evening through Sunday afternoon for the valleys and mountains of Los Angeles and Ventura counties.
 - The gusty winds, very low relative humidity, warm temperatures and dry fuels will likely result in extreme fire danger.
 - The greatest concern will be in areas of LA and Ventura counties that are prone to Santa Ana winds, however most of the area will experience at least elevated fire danger.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Dry with Periods of Gusty N-NE Winds, Strongest Saturday and Monday through Tuesday ***

Strong high pressure just west of CA will move west and weaken late today as a cold front approaches from the north. Today will be another dry and warm day with RH in interior areas dropping to 18-28%. N-NE surface winds will gust to around 25 mph in a few wind-prone spots from the western Cascade-Sierra slopes to the coastal mountains this morning.

The moderately strong dry cold front will move from north to south across the region tonight. At this point no precipitation is expected with the front. Temperatures will be cooler, but still several degrees above normal, and minimum daily RH will be higher. N-NE/offshore winds following the front could gust to 35-45 mph and locally higher in the usual areas from the western Cascade-Sierra slopes to the coast Saturday, with winds dropping off on Sunday. A similar cold front will pass over the region Sunday night, and similar winds are expected Monday and Tuesday. This front is expected to produce isolated light rain and snow showers in far northern areas. Mild and dry weather with light northerly winds can be expected Wednesday and Thursday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

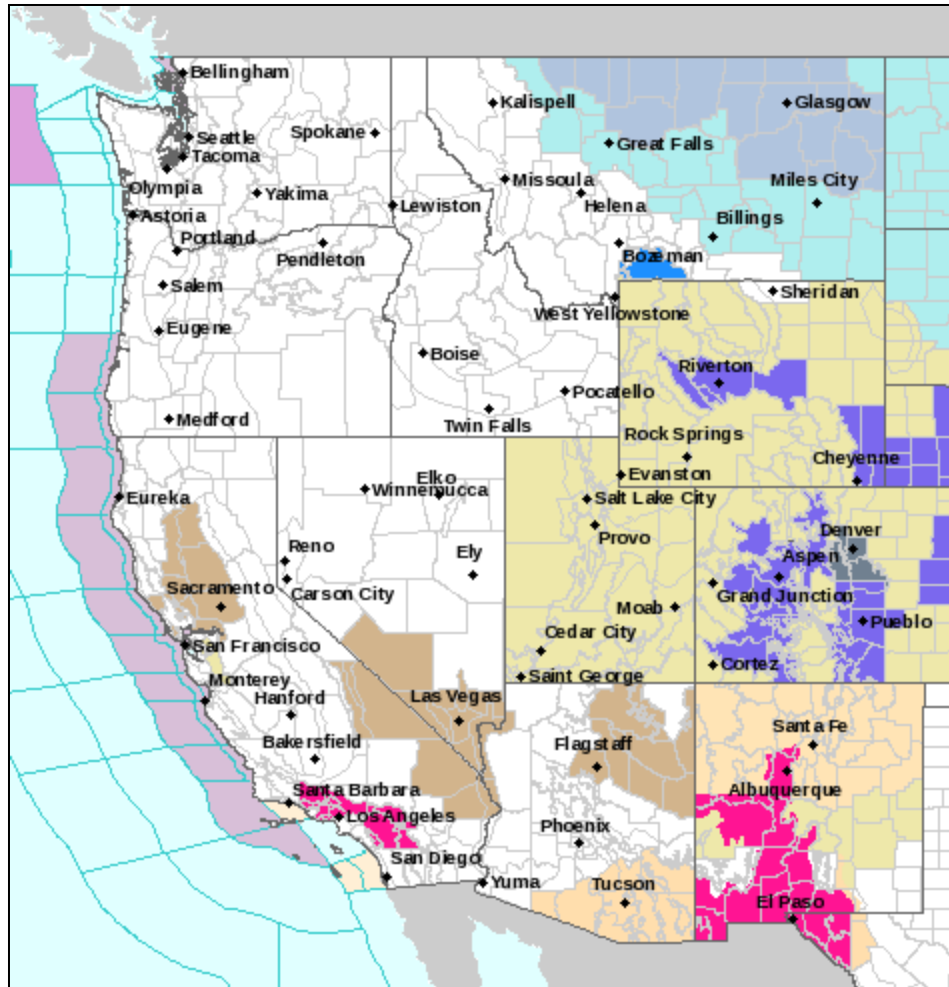

Offshore winds late Saturday night and Sunday

Cooler with a chance of showers Monday and Tuesday

An upper level low is expected to drop into the Southwest, resulting in gusty winds during the weekend and cooler weather early next week. Today and Saturday, onshore pressure gradients will return which will lead to temperatures dropping 2-5 degrees each day. Highs will be back to the 50s in the mountains to the 70s in the valleys by Saturday. As the low advances toward the area, gusty north and northwest winds of 20-30 mph will develop Saturday across the Kern County Mountains, the I-5 Corridor toward the Angeles National Forest. These winds will turn offshore and increase to the 25-35 mph with gusts over 60 mph Saturday night into Sunday. The strongest winds will occur over Ventura and northern Los Angeles Counties from the Santa Clarita Valley toward the Oxnard plain. Temperatures Sunday will jump back into the 80s over much of Southern California on Sunday. The winds should subside by Sunday evening. Sharply colder weather is expected Monday and Tuesday with highs dropping into the upper 30s and 40s in the mountains to the 60s at lower elevations. Scattered showers will be possible Monday evening into Tuesday, but most areas will see less than a quarter of an inch of rainfall. Gusty offshore winds may develop Tuesday night, leading to sunny and warmer weather returning by the middle of next week.
